WELLINGTON SITUATION.

Work Resumed at the Mines without any Serious Objection by the Strikers.

The Belgian Miners March in Procession and Hissed Those who Went to Work.

The Worst Element Striving Hard to Get the Upper Hand of the More Moderate.

(From our own Correspondent.)

WELLINGTON, Aug. 4.—For several days there have been mutterings and rumblings as to what was going to be, if the Messrs. Dunsmuir persisted in their determination—a rumor of which had in some way or other leaked out—to begin to get out coal again. On Saturday a number of men and boys made a preliminary start, a proceeding that was naturally regarded with much disfavor by the strikers, who, fearing the consequences of its successful prosecution—in so far as regarded their movement—made up their minds that something must be done to stop it. The union authorities at Nanaimo—and it is from directions in that quarter that the miners are governed—were at once communicated with, and several persons in authority are said to have arrived here from that place on Sunday, eager yet in the missionary work of stiffening the back bones of some who had been supposed to have an insufficient quantity of "lime" or perhaps "grit" in their spinal columns. A is announced to have been held yesterday (Sunday) afternoon at the Somerset House, on the Comox Road, at which important resolution were passed as to the course to be pursued in the future. These, it is said, involved the action to be pursued to the resident miners, who, it was understood, were prepared to work and the men who were reported by the intelligence committee of the Union as having been engaged elsewhere to come along and take the places of the strikers. It was also determined, it is said—but, as the meeting was a private one official information has not been given—to put on "the boycott," in a more rigorous form against such miners or other residents as countenanced the "scabs" and "blacklegs." It is worthy of note that the majority of the members deprecated any excesses or violations of the law. It was, after some warm discussion, resolved on the succeeding (this) morning and that as many members as possible should take part in it. There are, as may readily be imagined, a number of restless spirits who think that the miners are not going sufficiently far, and that it is incumbent upon them to make their influence more strongly felt. While some of the non-English speaking element were taking refreshments at the Comox road hotel, a woman produced a black flag which she intimated would be raised against all who dared to go against the Union. There were several "drinks" to the black flag. In a number of cases there were exhibitions of "fire water" and its effects, and in one instance it is rumored that a watchman in the employ of the company was last night "shunted off" his beat temporarily and warned that if he valued his health, he would do well to change his avocation. To another similarly obnoxious person a foreigner remarked, it is stated that there was such a thing as dynamite or powder and that, if he gave reason for it, he would be

MADE TO GO UP.

During the night some of the disaffected persons had a regular fete, and, at an early hour, had to be sent home by the special officers who are here under direction of Messrs. Bloomfield and Stevenson.

THE COLONIST representative found himself "hauled up" this morning under rather peculiar circumstances. Being desirous of seeing the miners start for work, he left orders at the hotel to be called at 6 o'clock. As it subsequently turned out, he got up about 5 a. m., the sounding of a whistle having induced him to believe that he had been forgotten—his watch having been left east, in the care of an "obliging" relative. Proceeding to the point at which the men were directed to assemble he discovered that none of them were there, and fearing that they had already started he went to the engine house, whence the whistle had sounded. Finding the door locked he went on to the end of the block, and noticing no one who could he turned back, and, having gone some distance, was called to a halt. Looking back he spied, comparatively close behind him, an individual who, during the intervals of his excessive profanity, demanded his business. This the newspaper man—not knowing with whom he was dealing or what was his authority—refused to give, saying that to his—the man's—superiors, if he were the company's watchman, he would explain that. "G—— d—— you," said the man, "I haven't got my revolver with me, but, if I had, I'd have winged you." "Two might play at that game," said the reporter. "And you say that, d—— you!" interjected the man; "come along with me to that cabin." "What cabin?" was asked. "To Mr. Bloomfield's," was the reply. "Why, certainly." Arrived at the cabin, it was found that the whole staff of constables was temporarily absent, upon which the reporter demanded to be taken to the house of the superintendent, who, being satisfied with his credentials ordered his release. The man was only doing his duty, being, as it was amply shown, the company's accredited guardian, but he might, at least, it would appear have been a trifle less obnoxious in his actions, and their accompanying remarks, he being so far as outward appearances are concerned amply able to swallow the pressman.

On his release the reporter of THE COLONIST, having laid in a good breakfast went to the starting point for the men, where he arrived in sufficient time to see a start made for shafts No. 4, 5 and 6.

While the miners were gathering, several small detachments of strikers came in their vicinity; but made no remark, their appearance being sufficiently significant. They were on their way to a previously appointed meeting place to organize their procession, which was mainly of foreigners, preceded by a large Canadian flag, after which came the men in two and threes, bearing a red flag, with inscriptions and symbols. This flag, it was subsequently explained to the writer, meant danger; but it would, if necessary, be followed by a black one, significant of destruction. The working staff duly arrived at their respective pits three going to work. Several old miners, who had taken part in other strikes, being invited to join in to-day's demonstration, strongly declined to have anything to do with it; saying that they had in previous years been parties to such things, but that experience had taught them wisdom. They would like to see, and there must be, better arrangements made for miners working in defective places, and a more equitable arrangement secured, by which it would be impossible for the "little bosses" to rival each other in the cheapness by which they carried on their respective mines. There is, it may be reported, every reason to believe that but for the precipitation of the strike and the attitude of the men as a union, there would have been no difficulty on these points. Work having been duly resumed it will continue to be prosecuted. The strikers, after their unsuccessful demonstration, had a drill on the street, after which they dispersed. "What will be the next?" is inquired.

In suit with what has already been sent, the morning's procession consisted of a yelling, howling mob which would not be tolerated elsewhere. There were about 75 persons, which in the afternoon was increased to 150. To-night's Free Press says the union men escorted the non-union to their work, and will continue night and morning to shame them if possible. Before the procession started a black flag was produced which they would not carry, but the banner of the Knights of Labor was borne on returning. The men at work were loudly hissed by the processionists. The women yesterday afternoon wore a black sashes at the miners' headquarters, and denounced the Dunsmuirs in opprobrious terms. To-morrow's procession will be taken part in by deputations from Northfield and Nanaimo, who are expected here in large numbers. No disturbance has taken place, and but for the socialistic element and liquor, none would be apprehended. Great care will be necessary to prevent trouble as the police force is utterly inadequate. There is any quantity of hooting and shouting night and day. The worst element is striving hard to get the upper hand of the more moderate.

International Medical Congress.

BERLIN, Aug. 4. The tenth international medical congress opened in this city to-day. Herr Von Boetticher, chief of the imperial home office, and representative of the chancellor; Herr Von Maltzahen, imperial minister of the treasury; Dr. Von Jossler, Prussian minister of ecclesiastical affairs, instruction and medicinal affairs; and Herr Herfurth, minister of the interior, represented the German government at the opening ceremonies, Prof. W. Virchow, president of the congress, made the opening address. He expressed the sympathies of the Emperor with the objects of the congress, and said that Germany would devote herself to science and human effort. Two thousand five hundred Germans and 2,500 foreign doctors, including 500 physicians from America, are present. Herr Von Baetticher made an address welcoming the delegates on behalf of the German states, and Dr. Von Jossler welcomed them on behalf of the educational department. An address welcoming the delegates to Berlin was made by the Burgomaster of the city. Dr. Hamilton, surgeon-general of the U. S. marine hospital service, who was secretary of the congress held last year at Washington, and others, made speeches in response to the addresses of welcome.

Common Meridian.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—An international conference for the purpose of fixing the common meridian is propesed to be held at Rome next year. The conference will also arrange a system of universal standard time. A suggestion, which is likely to be most strongly urged upon the conference, is to select a meridian of Jerusalem as common, replacing Washington and Greenwich.

In the case of the grand lodge and grand chapter, and the lodges and chapters of masons, the mourning is to be for six months, and in the case of mark lodges and mark masons for three months.

The Outrages in Armenia.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—In the Commons, to-night, Sir James Ferguson stated the government had received reports that Armenia was greatly disturbed, but that the government had no knowledge of any particular outrage, and until the government was fully informed of the fact it could not make any representations to the Porte. Mr. Gladstone contended that the government ought to make remonstrances immediately. The Porte should be notified of the course which England would take towards the Anglo-Turkish agreement if horrible misgovernment in Armenia continued.

Collapse of a Grand Stand.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—An accident occurred at Atherstone, Warwickshire, to-day injuring a large number of people, but providentially killing none. An immense grand stand had been erected from which to view the military tournament in progress at that place, and at the time of the accident it was occupied by fifteen thousand people, while ten thousand more were closely packed on either side. Suddenly a crash was heard, and a section of the stand fell to the ground, carrying with it over a thousand spectators. It was fortunate that the fall was not very great, as many people might have been killed; but as it was a large number were injured, some of them seriously. When the crash came, the immense gathering became panic-stricken and trampled upon the prostrated ones in their frantic efforts to escape from a danger, the extent of which they were not aware. Several cool-headed men were successful in allaying the fears of the fleeing ones, and turned many of them back to render assistance to the injured. Doctor Parke, surgeon of Stanley's expedition, was present, and he, with several local physicians, dressed the wounds of the injured.

The Situation in Buenos Ayres.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—A correspondent of the Times at Buenos Ayres says: Dr. Pellegrini, president of the senate, threatens to resign. President Celman has offered every post in the cabinet to the leaders of the opposition, but the offers have been declined. Officers of regiments recently opposed to one another are now fraternizing and declare that henceforth the troops will be united. Naval officers have resumed the commands they deserted during the revolt. Police and members of the fire department are guarding President Cellman's house and will defend it against any surprise by the army.

Emperor William in England.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The Hohenzollern, with Emperor William and Prince Henry, arrived at Cowes this morning from Ostend. As the Hohenzollern entered the harbor the Queen signalled, "Welcome." The Prince of Wales and Duke of Connaught were on board the royal yacht Albert to meet the German Imperial party and convoy the Hohenzollern to a landing stage where a number of other members of the royal family awaited the arrival of the Emperor. The Emperor was at once driven to Osborne house, and received at the entrance by the Queen, the Princess of Wales and the Duchess of Edinburgh. He wore the uniform of a British admiral. The band played German and English anthems. After luncheon the Queen and Emperor had a private interview, which lasted some time. In the afternoon the Emperor and Prince Henry drove through Osborne, and visited the Marchioness of Lorne and Duchess of Edinburgh. The Queen's party included Count Hatzefeldt, the German Ambassador. To-morrow the Emperor will attend the yacht races on the Solent and dine at the Royal Yacht club.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

Against Mongolians.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2.—The council of federated trades has sent the following telegram to Washington: "To the Pacific Coast Representatives in Congress—The council of federated trades of the Pacific coast, representing the often expressed opinions of the great mass of working people on this side of the continent, respectfully, but firmly, request that the tonnage and mail subsidy bills, now before your honorable body, be so amended as to prohibit the employment, on subsidized lines, of persons ineligible to American citizenship, notably Chinese and Japanese, as being not only prejudicial to the interests of the seafaring people of our own race, but such service is notoriously inefficient and a perpetual source of danger to the lives of passengers and others sailing on those ships. Steamers sailing on this coast that would benefit by a subsidy carry Mongolians. We have expressed no opinion for or against this bill, but only ask this protection for the lives and interests of our people."

The Second Life Lost.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2.—The second killing, growing out of the molders' strike in this city, took place this evening. Walter R. Rideout, a young apprentice in the City Iron works, while on his way home was attacked in a street car by Henry A. Sievert and another striker, who has not been found. Rideout had a pistol in his overcoat pocket, and in attempting to draw it to defend himself it accidently exploded and Sievert was shot in the side. He died shortly afterward in the receiving hospital and Rideout was charged with murder.

A Perilous Position.

HALIFAX, Aug. 4.—The steamer Portia arrived this morning from Newfoundland en route to New York, Capt. Ash said, said with reference to the encounter his steamer had with an iceberg off Fogg's'le and that it was a most miraculous escape for the steamer. The iceberg was fifteen feet high and six hundred feet long. It broke in three pieces just as the Portia was passing it. One of the pieces, 200 feet long, which had sunk, came up under the steamer, lifting her entirely out of the water. She remained for some minutes resting on the huge cake of ice, when a tremendous sea set her free. The stanchions in the saloon of the steamer were displaced and bent, and the under girders of the dining table smashed. Capt. Ash declares that he was never in such a perilous position before.

THE EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT

Sermon Delivered in the Reformed Episcopal Church on Sunday by Rt. Rev. Bishop Cridge.

"Man Goeth Forth to His Work and to His Labor Until the Evening."

In the Reformed Episcopal Church on Sunday morning, Rt. Rev. Bishop Cridge preached on the Eight-Hour Question, a large number of workingmen and representatives of the labor unions being present. The right rev. gentleman taking as his text Psalms civ. 23—

"Man goeth forth to his work and to his labor until the evening."

Said:—In speaking to you this morning, my brethren and friends on the much agitated question of shorter hours of labor for workingmen, I would ask you kindly to distinguish what I may say as a matter of personal opinion from what I may deliver on the authority of the Word of God. In the former case I simply contribute my share as one of our Christian citizens to the solution of a difficult question to the best of my judgment and belief, and as such ask the indulgence of such of my hearers as may think differently from myself. I do not hold, indeed, that the Christian minister should give his opinions on matters indiscriminately, for thus he might often be wasting his own time and that of his hearers. But the question before us, I apprehend, is not of this sort. It is one that touches our religion very closely. The first man was a workingman; his employer the Lord himself. As all then do the will of God in honest labor, whether of the head or hands, any strife between head and hands partakes of the nature of a civil war, and is a disruption of the unity of the body, and it surely becomes the duty of a Christian minister, not as an arbitrator, still less as a partisan, to do what in him lies to allay the strife and to restore the unity.

I would observe, then, first, far as I understand it, the case involves no question of right. The workingmen do not say that their liberty has been infringed, or their rights invaded. There is no question of the right of every workingman to carry his labor where he pleases, and to make the best of it for himself that he can; or of the right of employers to exercise a similar discretion on their part. No doctrines of socialism will ever be able to alter this right so long as Christian nations enjoy the liberty wherewith Christ hath made them free. As to those who would bring in anarchy, they will never succeed, for the commonalty is against them. But it does not follow that when we have said this we have said all. I am looking at the case as in populous countries. If no law were binding but that which is written, this were a harder world to live in than it is. But there is an unwritten law, deep in the hearts of men not utterly depraved, which has softened, and is softening beyond all telling the hard conditions of human life; a law whose precepts are rather in the spirit than in the letter, called into more living exercise by the religion which we all profess; a law whose neglect is chargeable with a vast amount of the miseries which afflict mankind; miseries nowhere more conspicuous than in the condition of the vast numbers of the working classes. It has been truly observed in a recent utterance on the subject that there is in Christian England at the present time "a condition of life as cruel as that of the Roman slave." And this condition does not accrue from outrageous laws or violation of legal right, but from men taking advantage of their fellowmen. The hungry belly and naked back was put into the hands of men greedy of gain—all the while acting within their legal rights a whip of scorpions more stinging than the lash of the slave driver, and wielded more mercilessly than was ever done by the hands of Egyptian taskmasters over Israel the oppressed. Thank God the awful problem is engaging the solicitude of all orders of Christian minds actuated by the unwritten law, and when its solution is reached, as we hope and pray it will, the results may be gathered up, and, transferred to the written code. No such extreme case affects us here, further than as affording the opportunity of remarking how the guilt of taking advantage of others' distress may be more widely incurred than we are apt to think. Few of us ever consider how often the very garments we have worn were wet with the tears of the overworked, for we all like to buy in the cheapest market, little recking at what cost to others our own pockets have been spared. Few of us but would be rich if we could, or that do not wink at the sordid economies which may conduce to our desire.

But to come to the simple issue before us, I must confess that to my own mind there is something very captivating, in the idea of the threefold division of our 24 hours' day; one third for labor, one-third for refreshment and rest, and one-third for improvement and for devotion to social and domestic affairs. I know that it is said that men will not spend aright the time thus gained, and only desire the boon for more free indulgence in vicious excess. It may be so in some cases, but I do not think that the mass of workingmen are thus vicious or that they ever were. Surely the records of vicious excess stand more against the rich than against the poor. We need no mere decisive testimony of this, so far as workingmen of our own day are concerned, than the conduct of the masses in the greatest city in the Christian world during the recent agitations. Brutality and drunkenness are the exception more than the rule among workingmen. Besides which they have powerful allies to aid in improving their condition. The advancement of learning and the cause of temperance are bringing them more and more into the regions of purer air. Here is the security against the abuse of relaxation of toil. The temptations to idleness, the incentives to crime, will be lessened rather than increased under a less exacting rule. The gaps in the social system will be less conspicious; the rudeness of manner through the absence of culture will be softened. If such relaxation can be achieved, not as by right but by a good mutual understanding between employers and men, society will rejoice and feel the better for it.

There is surely little force in the objection that the proposed shortening of hours will so reduce the sum of the products of labor as to materially impoverish society. Eight hours instead of ten; a loss, if universal, which it is not, of one fifth. But look at the overwhelming superfluity of products and the uses they are put to, and where is the loss? Life would not be bereft of one of its charms if that superfluity were reduced. I will not say by one-fifth but by one-half. Our superfluities and wanton wastes are a sin and a shame, and are fast bringing us to the condition of the once mistress of the world when culminating in her corruptions to her overthrow. Be sure that the luxurious classes are preparing a rod for their own backs. But with regard to the loss, whatever it may be, it must ultimately come upon society, and society is surely able to bear it.

But it is not reason that I should detain you with reflections of my own as to the probable effects of the proposed relaxation of the toil of the working classes. Let me rather speak of the way in which the present controversy should be carried on, and the spirit in which alone the strife may be composed. I know of no compendious specific to deal suddenly with the labor question with its thousand roots and ramifications entering into the social system everywhere and complicating it inconceivably. There is no warrant for the Christian minister to go about to settle worldly disputes. "Man! who made me a judge or a divider over you?" Nor is there any common principle among men to arbitrate amid conflicting interests and selfish passions, which interests and passions, diverse and irreconceivable, constitute burning questions which courts cannot settle nor human wisdom solve. The business of the ministry is not to determine issues, but to assist in reaching them aright. Some questions are simple and terminable by common justice. It cannot be said here that justice is wholly on the one side or wholly on the other. We cannot say to the opposing sides as the town clerk said to the riotous assembly at Ephesus, "The law is open, and there are deputies; let them implead one another." This question cannot be argued out on worldly principles. We feel it little here in this "paradise of workingmen," but God have mercy upon mankind if there be no other way of settling the question among the great populations but self-interest. But there is a better way; there is a remedy which if used aright will act as the solvent and disintegrator of the complications and tangles which cumber the cause, and, thank God, there are not wanting signs of its presence and use already. I am old enough to remember the machine riots in England, and the judgments, penalties, and punishments by which settlement was evaded rather than the question set at rest. The event has proved that the masses were blind, and their violence inconsiderate. But they thought they were right, and how could they help it? Who had taught them better? In my day a large proportion of the poor could neither read nor write, and the upper classes well deserved the name of conservatives, though the term was not yet invented, for out of this state of ignorance they promised and vowed the people should never come if they could help it. But God is stronger than man; God who is ever leading men forth from darkness into light, letting the oppressed go free, and breaking every yoke. Now the cry on all hands is, "Educate the people," by none more loudly raised than by their erst-while oppressors. It was a great victory, and a victory of far-reaching effect; an instalment, perhaps, of greater things to come. In what form they will come depends upon what use the contending parties make of the light which all in common enjoy, for the light is not now hidden under a bushel, but shines brightly over hill and dale; and upon the spirit in which they go about to guard their worldly interests. "Look not every man on his own things, but every man on the things of others." It is another form of the Golden Rule, a practical direction for working it out. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Is this law for the rich only? Is it not for all? If God says, "Weep and howl ye rich men for your miseries that shall come upon you," so much the more should the masses in vindicating their wrongs bear this law in mind. If the judgments of God seem to lean more to the side of the poor than of the rich, it is because the latter have the upper hand, and too much incline to use it. "Do not the rich oppress you and drag you to the judgment seat?" No, not now; but the disposition to take advantage is strong. It has been too much the way in past times. The poor are not forbidden to seek the things that are just and equal. The contentment enjoined on men is not a slavish acquiescence in a state of misery and wrong. "If thou mayest be free, use it rather." If not, be content, not with thy lot, as if thou mightest never seek to better it in right ways, but in thy lot, rather than use violence, knowing that thou hast efficiency in thyself, through God that dwelleth in thee with riches more than gold.

If it is too much to hope that this law will be observed by the mass on either side, it is good to feel that more observe it now than in times past, when no ray of sympathy between the contending parties softened the strife, and when there was only merciless exactions on the one side, and blind violence or sullen discontent on the other. There is a growing disposition to consider fairly the whole case. It seems to me that if working men look at things from the employer's standpoint they may see that as a rule employers work more than men, and have fairly won their vantage ground. Property has rights as well as labor. The homesteads of working men, inviolately their own, as securely as the mansions of the rich are evidence of this.

Duties are another question. Law can secure rights, but it cannot enforce duties. But what considerable things, we may ask, have been done in the world without wealth, the wealth of individuals? If the inspiration of a great discovery has come to a poor man, how could he have worked it out without assistance? Men, whose wealth procured them leisure, have benefited the world by their leisure. Anger against wealth, then, as such, is TOO MUCH PAPER.

Cause of the Revolt in the Argentine Republic.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Among the passengers on the steamer Umbria this morning was one who left Buenos Ayres on July 12th. He said: "When I left Buenos Ayres there had been several public or civic meetings held there at which revolutionary speeches were made. One of the meetings I attended was held in the public baseball grounds. There were probably 15,000 or 20,000 persons present. A Mr. Arem presided and the speeches were of a fiery nature. One cause for complaint was the overissuing of land bonds. Such bonds in the province of Buenos Ayres alone have been issued to the amount of $300,000,000. The meeting resulted in a denunciation of the Government and its methods of financiering. and calling for the reformation of its ways.

"After the meeting I saw sailors and soldiers, armed with Remington rifles and with fixed bayonets, on guard around the President's residence. The crowd in the streets was something amazing. While the people surged toward the President's house the guards pushed them back at the point of the bayonet. This lasted for a while until a rifle was discharged, and the crowd scattered to seek shelter wherever they could. The rifle had been discharged accidentally, it was said. However, I tell this to show what the feeling has been for the past few months. It was thought that the President would be pulled out of his house and severely handled.

"Then Uriburn was made Financial Minister. He started in for a thorough reorganization: The new Financial Minister asked for the resignation of the president of the National Bank and several other high officials, but the President would not support him in these requests. This resulted in Uriburn's resignation. Senor Garcia, whom the cable says the revolutionists want succeeded by Senor Romero as Minister of Finance, was then appointed. Garcia was for many years president of the National Hypothecating Bank, an institution that has issued cedulas or land bonds in enormous quantities, aggregating fabulous sums of money. He is a very efficient man, but a terrible 'paper' man.

"Carl s Pellegrini, the vice-President, who holds the Governmental reins now that the President has disappeared, is an excellent man, and I have no doubt that eventually he will become President.

"Now, as to the cause of all this tumult. The country itself is one of wonderful resources. In fact, I do not know of any country, or any section of any country, that promises a more brilliant future. The great and only trouble is too much paper. Its fluctuations leave business men in a state of uncertainty from day to day. We need money down there—that is, ready money. Even workmen and clerks are paid in paper that comes into their hands to-day at one price, and to-morrow has dropped several points. We can't get enough money for our wants. My hat, my suit of clothes, everything I possess, comes from London. I pay for it in paper and the merchant who sold it to me must pay his creditors for it in gold. The merchant has a hard time of it. We are not a manufacturing country and, therefore, have to rely upon England mostly for our goods. The Government wants now to issue $100,000,000 more paper. The people do not want it. The Government, however, is perfectly good, so far as standing by the amount of paper it issues. It will never repudiate it.

"President Celman is a headstrong fellow, and will have things go his own way at all hazards. He has always taken excellent care of his friends in governmental and other ways. The next Presidential election does not come off until October, 1892, and the people of Buenos Ayres are not willing to wait and settle the issue at the polls. In fact, the anti-Juarista party have little hope of winning in the elections. They have been ruled for years by the people of the interior provinces, who are manipulated against them. The Governors of the different States have great power, and are able to control the elections to a considerable extent in the inland States, where the people are not as intelligent and as educated as are the people of the State of Buenos Ayres.

"The majority of the State Governors at the present time are members of the Juarista party, and they are already planning to control the election of 1892. For this reason the people of Buenos Ayres have resorted to force. They did this in 1880, but were overcome in that revolt, having the army against them. This time that portion of the army stationed at Buenos Ayres made common cause with the citizens, and is on the side of the insurgents."

ANOTHER RAILROAD DEAL.

The Canadian Pacific is Absorbing Eastern Lines—Uninterrupted Communication Between Montreal and Providence.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 1.—It is rumored here that the Boston and Maine Railway company is after the New York, Boston and Providence railroad. The most startling feature of the deal is the statement that the backer of the Boston and Maine railway is the Canadian Pacific. This line requires for its New England support a terminus whence its line steamers would be run to New York. As the Boston and Maine now reaches Worcester, the Providence and Worcester division of the New York, Providence and Boston, could it be obtained, would furnish the Canadian Pacific uninterrupted communication between Montreal and Providence. The Providence and Worcester together with the Concord and some western roads, have long been members of the Canadian Pacific. A dispatch line merging the New York, Boston and Providence in the Boston and Maine would not only mean the control of the Stonington Ship company's fine fleet, but the latter corporation as a road owns a controlling interest in the boat.

WHO IS THE OWNER?

TO THE EDITOR.—The miners at Nanaimo did not make the coal. It was formed there in ages past by the aid of the sun and not by the labor of man. The miners now merely dig it out of the ground and so, of course, are entitled to very good wages. In no case can it be shown that the miners are entitled to a share of the profits arising from the sale of the coal. The coal once belonged to the government of British Columbia. They parted with it for a valuable consideration, and so it now belongs to those who bought it. If the coal belonged to and was worked by the government the profits arising would belong to the state and not to the people who now merely dig it out. It would be difficult to prove that the coal had been formed at Nanaimo for the benefit of British Columbians in particular or for mankind in general. It is often said that the world was created for man, but this, as a mere convenient mode of speech, a mere arrogant assertion of man himself. The wild animals or even the trees might set up a similar claim. Man got on the earth somehow or other and in fact is there and means to stay. This is all about what is known of his introduction here. What is best socially for mankind in general is a matter that has been disputed from time to time immemorial, is not settled and never will be settled whilst man remains a human being. That there is plenty of room for improvement is obvious—that there always will be room is much more than probable.

If any one supposes the late R. Dunsmuir left millions in cash, he is mistaken. The money gained by the coal built a railway, ships, steamers, houses, and so forth, and so the proceeds of the coal may still be said to be in the country, giving life to its industries and employment to many who would not otherwise have had it or been here at all. Does anyone suppose that the government would have discovered, or discovering would have worked these mines and have done the same? There can be but one answer, No. If the government wishes, there is plenty of room for the experiment. The strike at Nanaimo is much regretted by all, and both sides require hypnotizing, or at all events the professional socialist leaders do. As to British Columbia and Nanaimo in particular being a hell on earth, it seems strange that people cling to it so closely and never wish to leave. If British Columbia be hell, it is a very pleasant place, and most people will be content to abide in it.

X.

JAMES' BAY FLATS.

TO THE EDITOR:—After all the late talk about the "single tax" it is amusing to see the Mayor and council desirous of selling James' Bay for dollars. If the Mayor had really an idea that the "single tax" is just in principle, the proper thing for ..... and council to do would be to rent James' Bay—to let it out for building, granting the builders leases for a number of years at a given rental. At the end of the period, the City would resume possession; perhaps the city wish to put up buildings themselves and rent them. They might get a loan on mortgage for the purpose, and, oh my, wouldn't it be good for their friends. Anyhow here is an opportunity for the Mayor to test the principle—for by this time doubtless, he has educated at least the citizens up to the mark. Personally I think the corporation had better dredge out the mud and make the basin useful. Of course an iron bridge can be built from Government street having houses on each side and the water below for sanitary purposes. Perhaps the whole expense of this might be paid by rentals, but it is too much to expect James' Bay flats to pay for sewers, iron bridges, buildings and everything else. There would probably be the devil to pay also. How much rent does the corporation get, for illegally giving the public landing at Menzies street to the athletes?

PETER.

THE ATHLETIC CLUB BUILDING.

TO THE EDITOR; Possibly the best way to settle with the "athletes" is for the corporation to refund them all their expenses. The foundation of the building can be utilized for a public landing. Do not take to "law" unless friendly negotiation fail. The landing must be preserved to the public by one or the other, or both proceedings.

The Union Pacific's Steel Bridge Over the Columbia—The Draw One of the Largest in the World.

PORTLAND, Aug. 1.—George Morrison, chief engineer of the Union Pacific company's bridge across the Columbia on the road to Seattle, is in the city. His plans for the bridge are about completed, and work will be begun as soon as all the legal obstacles to construction are removed. The bridge will be of steel, with an upper roadway for wagons, and will be much the largest west of the Rockies. The draw will be one of the largest in the world, being 470 feet long, 50 feet high and 22 feet wide. The draw openings will be 200 feet wide in the clear. The cost of the bridge will be a million dollars.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP," and take no other kind.

Growing Popularity of Gaudy Colors In Place of Black.

As summer approaches, the demand for carriages and vehicles of all sorts increases. A great many persons who rent their carriages by the month during the winter, or do without them altogether, find it necessary, as well as financially feasible, to have their own vehicles during the summer. The wise ones buy new carriages every spring, and sell them when they come back from their summer outing, for the fashions in carts and road wagons change as in everything else, and a constant renewal of which is necessary, in order to keep up with the times.

This year the prevailing characteristic of fashionable turnouts will be their gaudiness. Black seems to be getting obsolete for light summer vehicles and dark green, with lemon or orange stripings, as well as blue with broad gold lines, are popular colors this year.

Still more in demand are the carts and phaetons which are left in natural wood color, such as oak with russet trimmings, and harness to match and with mountings of polished brass. The class of vehicles which will be used will not greatly differ from those of last year. Victorias are, of course, always in demand, and Stanhope, mail, and spider phaetons, T carts and buckboards, are being sold extensively.

An extremely pretty though odd turnout, which has recently been fitted up by a New York nabob for his country home consists of an oak buckboard with brass mountings. It is drawn by a pair of snow-white mules, harnessed with russet trappings.

It is said by the way, that imported harness is in great demand, but experienced dealers declare that the American harness wears much better than that of foreign make, and is quite as stylish.

THE NATIONAL SPIRIT.

Sir Charles Dilke says in his "Greater Britain" that the Americans are as proud of their country as if they had made it themselves. And he also observed how soon Englishmen, Irishmen, Scotchmen, Germans, Scandinavians and immigrants of other nations become transformed into enthusiastically patriotic American citizens. That very intelligent Englishman admired the intense nationality of the Americans, and he was surprised to see how quickly citizens from other lands became imbued with the national spirit.

In this pride of country and this desire to have men of other lands think highly of it, it would be well if Canadians were more like their American neighb rs than they are. Even native Canadians do not seem to have any very strong love for the land of their birth, and immigrants coming to Canada continue to act and speak as if they were strangers in a strange land. They do not become Canadians as foreign-born citizens become Americans. The land of their birth or the land of their fathers is still their land and they form themselv s into distinct national organizations in which the love of the "Old Land" is kept alive and sometimes to all appearance intensified. We have in Canada Englishmen who are more English than the English and Scotchmen who are more ardent Scots than those who have never left the Land o' Cakes.

This is unfortunate. This Canada of ours with all its faults and all its drawbacks, is a noble country. It has treated those who have made it their home most generously. Thousands who are now living in Canada in comfort and respectability would, if they or their parents had remained at "home," be struggling hard to gain a bare subsistence and many not succeeding. There are men high in position in Canada who have availed themselves of the advantages which the country offers to better their condition and to raise themselves in the world who would have been in the land of their fathers hewers of wood and drawers of water—that is if they could get wood to hew and water to draw which is not by any means certain. Yet many of these men will join in belittling the country to which they owe so much. It is not often that we find a Canadian enthusiastic in his praise of the land of his birth or his adoption. The Dominion Illustrated deplores this fact. It says:

"Happily the day is past when any son or daughter of Canada, by birth, or adoption, would stammer in asserting the fact. But our national sentiment still falls short of what it ought to be. Australians speak of us as a great people, with a dominion as large as Europe, with resources of soil, mine, river and forest practically exhaustless, with means of communication suited to our millions of industrious workers, a constitution admirably adapted to our needs and the assurance of a grand destiny in the fulness of time. Englishmen write with rapture of our great heritage. France felicitates her sons in the New World air the position they occupy as heirs of two civilizations. No tourist that visits our shores, in fact, no student of our political system, no economist who has had the opportunity of surveying our treasures of natural wealth has failed to congratulate us on so fine an inheritance, on prospects so full of hope. Yet we belittle ourselves. Our tone is too often that of malcontents and ingrates. We contrast ourselves to our own disparagement with our neighbors. We exaggerate our divisions and emphasize our local rivalries. We bewail our slowness of initiative, our lack of fruitful enerprise, our talents left buried in the ground."

This is to be deplored. It would be far better if Canadians were continually blowing their own trumpets, if they formed too high an estimate of their own good qualities and if they set too great a value on the advantages and resources of their country than to be thus perpetually trying to make themselves and their country appear to be worse than they are.

A SCANDAL.

The latest social sensation in London has been the Dunlo divorce case. Lord Dunlo is the eldest son of Lord Clancarty. He is described in a Canadian newspaper as a "carotty-haired, weak-eyed, crack-brained scion of aristrocracy." He has not yet attained his majority. This callow youth fell in love with Belle Bilton, a music hall singer and a very pretty girl. When Lord Clancarty heard of his hopeful son's escapade, he was dreadfully angry and threatened his son with the withdrawal of his allowance and other pains and penalties almost equally terrible. The miserable boy became scared and deserted his wife. He afterwards instituted a suit for divorce against her. The co-respondent was a Mr. Wertheimer, a friend of Lady Dunlo before she was married, and who remained her friend when she was abandoned by her husband. The gossips and scandalmongers were greatly disappointed because the revelations at the trial were not more spicy. The testimony was in fact rather tame. There was some very hard swearing on the part of the prosecution, and there was more than a suspicion of forgery, but, although the deserted wife was continually shadowed by detectives, nothing that could be construed into criminality was proved against her. There was some evidence about kissing, but it was so vague that the judge himself commented upon it in a sarcastic vein. In fact, Judge Hannon evidently sympathised with the plebian wife, and did not make any attempt to conceal his contempt for the patrician husband. His charge was strongly in favor of Lady Dunlo. Popular sympathy was on the side of the pretty music-hall songstress. The trial is likely to add greatly to her value as a singer. If she remains on the stage, crowds will flock to hear a live Lady sing. She has already been offered a very high salary by a London theatrical firm, and it is said that an enterprising Boston manager has also cabled her a magnificent offer. The whole affair is not likely to increase the respect of the people of the English-speaking race for the British aristocracy.

RELUCTANT COMMENDATION.

The Opposition has been rather slow in giving in its adhesion to the land policy inaugurated by the present Government. The action taken by the Government has been evidently a surprise to some of them, and if our reading between the lines is correct, not by any means an agreeable one. It has taken from them a source of discontent and a means of agitation. It in fact has nearly deprived the Opposition of its "raison d'etre." An Opposition with nothing to oppose will be in a rather anomalous position. It is no wonder, then, that the approval of the Opposition organs has been slow in making itself apparent, and that when it is expressed it is neither cordial nor gracious.

The News-Advertiser, on Saturday, alludes to the new policy in terms of commendation, and it deigns to assume towards the Government's a patronising tone. The administration has done what is right, and the Advertiser, therefore, may favor it, if it continue to do well, with the light of its countenance.

Our contemporary takes to itself the credit of the change that has been inaugurated, The Advertiser advocated a change in the administration of the public lands, and owing to its advocacy the change has been commenced. It a good deal more than hints that it was alone in its advocacy of the reform. The Times took pretty much the same ground. We trust that the two journals will some time in the future settle between them the credit that is due to each for convincing the Government that the time had arrived when the interests of the province demanded a change in the land system.

But it appears to us that both our contempories lost sight of the fact that the Robson Government is a new Government—and that it has had very little time to carry out the "programme" which its Leader had prepared. If they were as clear-sighted as they would have the world believe them to be they would have concluded that others besides themselves had seen that the conditions which made the land policy hitherto pursued suitable for this province have ceased to exist and that the circumstances of the country require a new and a different policy, and it might have occured to them that the change would have been effected if they had been altogether silent on the subject. We have good reason to believe that the course which the Government is now pursuing was not decided upon yesterday or the day before. This may readily be inferred from the fact of the Government's taking it of its own motion and before the representatives elected in June last were afforded the opportunity of bringing upon those who compose it the least pressure. The Opposition organs must admit that they have of late said little or nothing about land reform and that the Government had no particular reason to believe that even its opponents looked upon it as a burning question on which immediate action was required. There is therefore no adequate cause for the self-glorification with which the Advertiser seasons its approval of the new Government's new policy.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD.

The Salvation Army celebrated its 25th anniversary at the Crystal Palace, London, on the 15th of last month. There were over one hundred thousand persons present most of whom were soldiers in the Army. There were among them representatives of many nations—Dutch, Germans, Belgians, French, Italians, Swiss, Swedes and Norwegians. The behaviour of this great multitude was admirable, and extorted praise from observers who do not look upon the Army and its methods with favor. The Times report says:

"Of the celebration itself the most unsympathetic and cynical would admit that it was satisfactory to see so many thousands enjoying themselves in a perfectly orderly fashion, with none of the accompaniments of drinking and rowdyism with which great gatherings are too frequently associated. In the Army, abstinence from drink and tobacco is not only a 'counsel of perfection' but a duty and condition of membership."

The article in the Times on the celebration is not, by any means, complimentary. An under-current of contempt is perceptible all through it. The wonderful thing about the Army, according to the Thunderer, is that it has lasted. For a movement of that kind, which almost everyone predicted would die young, to have lived to see the close of its twenty-fifth year is what excites the surprise of sceptics and scoffers.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

IN a silly paragraph, doubtless intended to be witty, which appeared in the evening paper last Saturday, it is intimated that in consequence of the "sourness of interested officials" in the Education Department, there had been unnecessary delay in issuing cheques to the teachers for last month. Now, upon enquiry, it has been ascertained that, so far as the Education Department is concerned, the cheques were issued TWO DAYS EARLIER this year than usual. It is to be suspected that our contemporary was indebted to the "sourness" of some disgruntled teacher for its information—a source from which much of its inspiration is well understood to be drawn.

FROM the Statistical Yearbook of Canada, prepared by Mr. Sydney Roper, this summary is taken: The immigration of settlers into the Dominion increased from 88,700 in 1888 to 91,500; the revenue from $35,908,000 to $38,782,000; the expenditure from $36,718,000 to $36,719,000; the Dominion lands dealt with from 688,000 to 1,086,000 acres; the postoffices from 7,671 to 7,838; the letters carried from 80,200,000 to 92,688,000; the newspapers carried from 66,798,000 to 70,259,000; the imports for consumption from $102,847,000 to $109,673,000; but the exports fell from $90,203,000 to $89,189,000; the net debt increased from $234,000,000 to $237,000,000, the miles of railway in operation from 12,163 to 12,628; the train mileage from 37,391,000 to 38,819,000, and the deposits in postoffice saving banks from $20,689,000 to $23,011,000.

BANKERS—Bank of British North America.
SOLICITORS—Walker, Pemberton & Dumbleton, 18 Chancery Lane.
SECRETARY (pro tem.)—J. C. Bales.
This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring and extending the well-known and old established business of "The Vancouver Ale, Porter and Steam Beer Brewery," in the City of Victoria.
The promoters confidently expect, by the aid of capital and influence, to largely extend the business and introduce the production of Lager Beer, for which there is a large and growing demand throughout the Province. They will also hortly commence distilling.
The quantity of Lager Beer passed through the Custom House, Victoria, B. C., for the six months ended December 21st, 1880, was as follows, i. e., 13,430 gallons in bottles, 12,705 gallons in casks.
The quantity of spirits passed through the Inland Revenue Office for the year ended 30th June last was 66,019.93 proof gallons, and probably an addition of 50 per cent. may be made to this for lots entered duty paid.
Shares are offered to the public for subscription by a deposit of 50 per cent. per share on allotment, and the balance by assessments as required; no one assessment to exceed 10 per cent. of the subscribed capital.
Forms of application may be had of the promoters or secretary. jly25-tf

In Need of Repair.

It would be well if the authorities would give a little attention to the Craigflower bridge, over which a considerable volume of traffic is continually passing. The piles are all eaten away and cannot much longer support the structure they have held so long.

Injunction Granted.

On the application of Mr. A. B. Gray, an injunction was granted in the Supreme Court yesterday to restrain the James Bay Athletic club from further proceeding with the erection of their club and boat house at the end of Menzies street.

Still Doing Business.

We are very busy at Hastie & Erskine's, 62 Government street, but are still taking orders for furniture, for we have a very large and choice supply on hand Every taste can be suited, and the prices are the lowest in the city, for we have bought in the best markets. Call and see us.

Not a Lunatic.

Sergeant Langley, of the Provincial police has succeeded in capturing the supposed lunatic, who for the past week has alarmed the residents of Cadboro Bay by his presence. He proves to be a perfectly sane man, who accounted for his peculiar movements satisfactorily and was allowed to go.

New Houses.

Parties who are building now should take care and make arrangements to have a warm air furnace placed in the house They not only warm the house but ventilate it—taking fresh air from the outside, warming it and then distributing "it thro' the building." Ask me lennan and me feely all about them.

Pets for the Park.

Mr. Will. Braden and two companions enjoyed a hunt on Sunday afternoon, which netted them strange game. They were lucky enough to discover the home of a panther, while the householder was away and the only ones left to keep house were three pretty little panther kittens. These they took possession of, and brought to Victoria. They will be presented to the park.

A Personal Outfit Stolen.

A robbery was committed the other day in the house of a Mr. Grey, living on Samuel island. The thief, of whom no trace can be found, made off with three portmanteaux containing a good deal of clothes and other personal effects, a cheque for $200, a number of documents, a watch and chain, and some trinkets. The case is in the hands of the authorities.

Re. Carey vs. Corporation.

This, before Mr. Justice Drake in chambers yesterday, was a motion for a mandamus to compel the city to abstain on the claims of Mr. Carey for compensation by reason of the city having diverted the water of Corquitz river by the 16 inch main. An order was granted directing the city to proceed forthwith in appointing an arbitrator. The lawyers in the case were Messrs. Pooley & Bodwell for the plaintiff, and Messrs. Eberts & Taylor for the city.

Death of Frederick Steitz.

Death, yesterday morning, released from his suffering Frederick Steitz, who, for many months past, has been just lingering between life and death. He was a well-known and deservedly esteemed citizen of Victoria and his loss will be sincerely regretted. He came to Victoria in 1860, and, for several years, engaged in mining at Cariboo and Williams' Creek with varying success. Later he conducted a restaurant and bakery in Victoria, retiring a few years ago on account of failing health. He was 64 years of age, and leaves a brother and sister here, Mr. Geo. Steitz and Mrs. J. P. Pelletier, his only relatives in America.

An Interesting Engagement.

The theatre goers of Victoria will read with pleasure the announcement of the engagement of the distinguished emotional artiste, Maude Granger. Especially to those who appreciate the higher grade of dramatic presentation will her coming prove of particular interest. She will appear at The Victoria on next Monday and Tuesday evenings, in "Inherited" the first night and "The Creole" the second. "Inherited," which is a play of the intense emotional school, was written by Richard Davey, the well-known critic and playwright of London, assisted by Mrs. Lucy Hooper, the famous American newspaper correspondent at Paris. The play was originally produced at the Theatre de L'Application in that city about a year ago, where Miss Granger saw it. The actress is now en route from the east to San Francisco, whence she returns to New York and will produce "Inherited" there for an indefinite run.

Gone to the Bottom.

Messrs. R. P. Rithet & Co., on Sunday last received a letter from the Moodyville saw mill company, whom they represent, advising them of the probable total loss of the company's steamer Etta White. This little boat only a few weeks ago left the hands of the Albion Iron Works Co., who thoroughly overhauled her here, and put her in first-class running order. Her first trip after the repairs had been completed was to Buccaneer Bay, Welcome Pass, on the mainland coast, where she was to take a scow load of knees for Mr. Rithet's new dredge, now building in this city. Capt. Smith, who commands the White, had made the trip hundreds of times in the last 15 years, in which he has visited this logging camp among the rest. He, therefore, had no thought of danger. He made the up trip safely, and was on his way back, with the loaded scow in tow, when, early Friday morning, the White struck hard on a submerged rock in the narrow pass, above Howe Sound. The rock, which is unmarked on all the charts, punctured the steamer's bottom, and held her for a moment; then she slid off into deep water and commenced to fill. It was found impossible to check the in rush of water, and in one hour and a half the steamer had filled and dropped like a stone to the bottom, in ten fathoms of water. The men on board the steamer had to scramble along the tow line to the scow to save their lives, and just reached their refuge in time to see the White disappear. She now lies on an even keel, with her mast about one foot below water at low tide. There is little hope of successfully lifting her, although divers with appliances will soon visit the spot to report upon the chances of refloating the boat.

Visitors to the Flagship.

The captain of H.M.S. Warspite requests that visitors wishing to see that ship, will do so between the hours of 1 and 5 p.m., as they cannot be allowed on board except between those hours.

W. C. T. U.

The annual general meetiug of the Victoria branch of the above was held last evening, when the annual report was received, and an enjoyable musical and literary programme was disposed of.

At Their Old Work.

Edwin and David Caffee, the two youthful crooks who skipped from here to Seattle about a month ago, have been caught by Detective Barck, of that city, with a watch in their possession, which was stolen in West Seattle a few days ago. The boys have been locked up, and their case was to come up yesterday.

Sandbagging in Saanich.

Mr. William Downie, of Saanich, who was in town yesterday, tells of a serious sandbagging case in that district, which, however, has not yet been reported to the police. Mr. William Reay, the victim, was awakened at about 10 o'clock by a noise in the stable, and while investigating the cause was knocked down from behind with a sandbag. He says his assailants were two in number, but cannot identify them.

Drowned at Seattle.

Harry P. Shakespeare, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Shakespeare, of this city, was drowned at Seattle early on Sunday morning as he was walking to his lodgings not far from the water front. It was high tide when the fatal accident occurred, and a few hours later, when the water had fallen, the body was recovered, and the father of the deceased notified of the death of his son. Mr. Fred. Shakespeare crossed to Seattle yesterday to bring home the remains, which will be interred at Ross Bay cemetery to-morrow afternoon.

Tramway Talk.

Yesterday the tramway track layers commenced the work of blasting the big bluff on the Esquimalt road,and to day they expect to reach the Coach and Horses, having completed more than three-quarters of the new route. The conductors on the city lines are having "heaps of trouble" just now with ladies accompanied by children over the limit for whom they refuse to pay. The conductors find it hard to act in the matter, and the directors are now giving it consideration. They are undecided whether to cancel the issue of transfers, prosecute those who thus refuse to pay or instruct the conductors to stop the car when a fare is refused, and not start until the offending party has left the car.

An Important Question.

At the Pandora street Methodist church Sunday morning, Rev. Coverdale Watson, before commencing his usual sermon said he wished to make a few remarks on the eight hour question. A statement had been made current, he said, that the Methodist ministers have decided not to speak on this question. This was entirely a gratuitous piece of information, as he himself had signified no desire either way. He was a new comer here and had a great many things to do to get into touch with his congregation. His time was, therefore, very much occupied. The question was one which could not be handled at a moment's notice, but so far as he had gathered from the statements of the ministers dealing with it, the matter affected employer and employed alike. The Christian church is liable sometimes to be made a partisan, but we must guard against her entering upon anything that is debatable among men. She always has been a partisan of that which is christianly but not in worldly affairs. No doubt, said the rev. gentleman, when I have fully considered this matter, I will speak upon it.

At the evening service the anthem sung was "Oh, Gladsome Light" from Sullivan's "The Golden Legend." It is a remarkably pretty composition and was admirably interpreted by organist and choir.

THE BLACK JACK QUARTZ CO.

A Joint Stock Company Forming to Further Prosecute the Development of the Ledge.

The prospectus of the Black Jack Quartz Mining Co. Ltd, of Barkerville, Cariboo, has just been issued and states that the objects for which the company is established are: Mining and working quartz for precious metals and minerals in British Columbia; erecting or leasing mills and machinery for reducing ores; the acquisition of lodes and veins, and the obtaining of such water privileges and rights of way, and doing of such things as are conducive or incidental to the attainment of the above objects. The capital stock of the company is $120,000, divided into 60,000 shares of $2.00 each, the corporate existence of the company shall continue for 40 years; and the principal place of business shall be Barkerville. Five trustees shall manage the concerns of the company for the first three months, and their names are: Edward A. Martin, Samuel A Rogers, Joseph Denny, Alexander Sharp, and John Houser, all of Barkerville.

The company have a crown grant of 800 feet on the Black Jack ledge and 2,200 by location. A shaft 42 feet deep has been sunk on the ledge, and a drift of 20 feet has been run on the ledge from the bottom of the shaft, 202 tons of ore were taken from the shaft and drift, and crushed in a one-stamp mill, which yielded $932 in free gold, leaving 46 tons of sulphurets, which were worked at the Government Reduction works at Barkerville, yielding as a result $2,646.10 in gold, being 93 per cent. of the assay value. Over $5,000 has already been expended in prospecting the mine and erecting the one-stamp mill. The original promoters of the mine have formed themselves into a joint stock company, and have reserved as promoters stock 21,000 shares at $2.00 per share—$1.00 per share paid up—stock liable for $1.00 to be paid by assessments. Twenty-one thousand shares to be placed in the market for sale, for the purpose of developing the mine; $1.00 per share to be paid on subscription, and $1.00 to be paid by assessments, not to exceed 10 cents per share in any one month; 18,000 shares to be reserved stock for the benefit of all shareholders. No money is to be expended except for the development of the mine.

"WHOLLY UNINTENTIONAL."

The Shooting at Cobble Hill Was Purely Accidental—Mrs. Routledge's Story—The Funeral.

Nothing but the most meagre details of the shooting affair at Cobble Hill reached town on Saturday, but the woman, Mrs. Routledge, was brought to Victoria on Sunday, and her story places it in an entirely different aspect. She is not a woman that would impress one with any terrible feelings; she is florid, good-natured and motherly looking. Just now, suffering from extreme nervous prostration, she looks anything but murderously inclined.

Her story is very simple, and was told with every appearance of sincerity and sorrow. "There is not much to tell," she said, "Joe had been drinking very much lately, and this time he wanted to go and get some more whiskey. I wouldn't let him go, and told him he had had enough. He lifted a log and threw it at me, and then went out and didn't come back for some time. I went out afterwards to try and stop him from going; he had harnessed the horse. He got into the wagon and was going off; I noticed a little bottle lying in it with some whiskey, and I asked him to make that do. I saw a rifle in it, too, and asked him what he was going to do with that; he said 'Nothing,' and handed it to me. I said if you must go I suppose you must, and with that I threw the gun on my shoulder and turned to go into the house. The gun went off and Joe says, "Oh, my God, I'm shot!" and he fell dead into my arms. I would sooner, much sooner, have committed that to myself than to him, and everyone round there knows that, too. I didn't know the gun was loaded, and I don't know how it got there. I think one of the children put it there the night before. Joe was always quarrelsome when he took these spells, and the children always got out of the way. God knows the thing was an accident, for—(here the poor woman utterly broke down)—He knows I loved Joe better than all in the world."

Mrs. Routledge is going to have legal assistance in the matter. She feels incensed at the verdict of the jury. The children, four in number, the eldest of whom is a boy of 15, are being taken care of for the present by her son-in-law, Edward Forrest. The case will not come till the assizes in November, but it is likely, for the children's sake, Mrs. Routledge will be liberated on bail.

THE FUNERAL.

The Funeral of the late Joseph Dougan took place on Sunday at 5:30 p. m. The cortege left his late residence, attended by many sympathising friends, who were increased in numbers until the private burying ground was reached, when there was a large company of both old and young to pay the last tribute to one who was so popular. Most of the pioneer farmers were solemnly standing around the open grave. Ever since the tragic news was given out there was every evidence of sorrow and on every hand a contrast was drawn between his late life and the happy sphere he moved in before drink began its ravages. He was possessed of many excellent qualities and a large heart. All who knew him as a young man felt pride in his acquaintance and he was always in possession of much property. At his demise he was only 41 years of age and was married in 1880, but his wife died shortly afterward leaving no children. He leaves one brother in Cowichan, one in Australia, and a brother and sister in Ireland. The pall bearers were W. J. Shearing, Jas. Boal, John Devine, Thos. Marshall, Roger Douglas, Arthur Todd, D. McPherson and John Nelson.

"THE WICKED WORLD."

A Charming Comedy With Two Messages—It Has a Strong Moral and is Exceedingly Entertaining.

In every case there are two sides to a story, two shades to a picture, two meanings to a statement, and there are two phases in human nature, one known by the broad and general term of good, and the other by the equally broad and general term of bad. There are, however, qualifying shades to both, the bad has its redeeming features, the good its condemning points, and so the balance of power is effected and maintained, and the just ends of Providence consummated. A light comedy can scarcely be said to enforce these facts, but there are instances when the stage preaches a more forceful and convincing sermon than the pulpit. To those who attended The Victoria last evening, and who were in the mood for interpreting the piece of the evening as a sermon there was given ample opportunity. Those who went for entertainment and amusement had also food for their desires. Apropos of this, it were unfair, as it would be unjust to the performers, to take advantage of this occasion to comment on the ill bred habit of the modern male leaving a theatre entre les actres.

The little piece called "The Wicked World" is an illustration of two sides of human nature, and was very nicely interpreted on this occasion to a large audience. It is not a story that will long remain on the memory; it creates a favorable impression, and, like a sunbeam, vanishes, forgotten as soon as it dies. Still it is just as pleasant while it lasts. Immortal bliss longs for the checkered happiness of mortal man. The wish is gratified, and there is consequent discord. The scene opens in a bower of Fairyland situated upon the sunny side of a silver summer cloud. The place is very beautiful, and is peopled by beautiful, happy fairies who know no care. Some of their number have been to earth and have brought back stories of the awful strife which reigns below. The story of man's and woman's love causes the fairies to sigh for the same gift. It is granted, and they are tutored ably by two mortals (counterparts of absent fairies), summoned from earth. Confusion, discord and unhappiness reign supreme for a season, the men are more demonlike than when on earth, the hitherto peaceful fairy maidens become plotting, envious, lying women, and all is a seething cauldron of human wickedness for a time, till it is terminated by the necessary expulsion of the mortals consequent on the return of the absent fairies. Then order is restored and the hitherto pure atmosphere of fairyland is more pure from the lesson its inhabitants have been taught.

The staging was remarkably pretty, perhaps a little too floral for such a cloudy habitation, but nevertheless pretty. The costumes were appropriate, and in some instances positively charming The performance had many commending features, what slight defects there may have been being only such as were on the surface and not very noticeable. Perhaps Miss Beeton, as Zayda, showed to unexpected advantage—she is matter of fact, pleasantly catchy and pertly convincing. Miss Kathleen Brady had a rich field for her declamatory power, but such an opportunity has also its temptations, to which it must, in justice, be said she showed but little sign of giving way. Her natural ease and grace were also largely in demand, and she responded generously. Miss Macauley seems better adapted to an envious than any other role. It was not wholly so in the present case, but a determined effort carried her creditably through the unsuitable passages Mr. Frederic Adderley was a more than acceptable Ethais, both mortal and immortal; he was free, natural, manly and very taking. He received good support from Lieut. Chadds, as Phyllon and Mr. Edgar Marvin as Lutin. The other characters were "Neodie," Miss Macnaughton Jones; "Locrine," Miss Sadie Brady, "Leila," Miss Laura Lowen; "Colombe," Miss Eva Lowen; "Eva," Miss Mary Macauley, all of whom gave valuable support.

The piece was preceded by a laughable farce entitled "The Secret," in which the characters were "Mr. Dupins," Mr. C. W. Rhodes; "Mr. Valare," Lieut. Paterson; "Thomas," Mr. Frederic Adderley; "Mrs. Dupins," Mr. M. W. Perrens; "Angelica," Miss A. Elsie Thorpe; "Stuttering Porter," Mr. J. Egerton Thorpe.

Professor Sharpe supplied the incidental music.

To Mrs. Adderley and Miss Brady belong the credit of the tasteful stage decoration.

NO DISCOUNT FOR CASH

At the Police Court—Very Little Product from Sunday's Festiving for Monday's Accounting.

The police had brought very little grist to be ground when the machinery of the city mill was set in motion yesterday morning. There were only two drunks, each of whom was perfectly certain that he had not been drunk, and that it was only mistaken zeal on the part of the officer who brought him in. One of them, with the compound name of Thomas Thomas, was quite positive that he was able to walk, talk and conduct himself like a gentleman. This was between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning, when gentlemen are accustomed to seek the retirement and quiet of their chambers after the glare and excitement of the convivial party. Gentlemen at this stage are always noted for their thoroughly good spirits and desire generally to rouse the sleeping populace to the fact that daylight is appearing, or about to appear, in the eastern sky. Thomas had been practising this gentlemanly diversion the morning previous to his arrest, and had been seen home by a policeman. This was not unconstitutional, as anyone who is up late (or early, or all night) can testify. However, Thomas repeated the experiment, but he fell into the hands of a different policeman and he brought up at the police station. "Not Guilty" he pleaded. Now when a drunk pleads not guilty, the usual and natural inference taken by the court, that is the magistrate, clerk, policemen, reporters, audience and other prisoners, is that the pleader is unquestionably drunk, if not in an active, in a passive sense, or as the magistrate says, he is suffering from the fumes. Thomas was accused of being in this state of passive inebriateness, but sufficiently sober to be tried. "Five dollars, to be paid forthwith," came the familiar sound from the bench. "That settles it," said the prisoner, who had mounted the judicial throne, and, both hands in both pants' pockets, seemed prepared to discuss either the question at issue or any other intricate legal point. "If you pay the money it will be settled," suggested the sergeant mildly. "I'll settle it all right; don't you fear about that," said Thomas convincingly, with the air of a monied man. He counted out five dollars and looked at Mr. Dowler, who took charge of it. No discount for cash! No encouragement for ready money customers at this store. The music of a fairly good basso voice was heard grumbling out of court.

Another drunk was disposed off for the same amount, and an old man named Jewell Simpson was charged with stealing a small valise from Mr. Julian Ralph. It was found that Simpson had sold the grip to a pawnbroker for a dollar, and the fact having been traced to him he was arrested. The case was remanded till to-day.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

A very successful tournament was held on Saturday, the 2nd inst., by the Cowichan Lawn Tennis club. The entries numbered three for the ladies' singles and ten for the gentlemen's singles. The result of the day's play was as under;—

Ladies' Singles—Miss Barkley beat Miss Musgrave, 6-3; 3-6; 6-4. Miss Barkley beat Miss Arrowsmith, 6-1; 6-0. Miss Barkley thus became the winner of the ladies competition.

Men's Singles—First round—Messrs. H. Combe, R. Barkley, W. H. Elkington, J. Musgrave, R. Musgrave and E. Musgrave drew byes. Mr. A. B. Longe beat Mr. H. Hayes, 6-1; 3-6; 6-4. Mr. B. H. T. Drake's opponent failed to appear.

Second round—Mr. H. Combe beat Mr. R. Barkley, 6-5; 6-5. Mr. J. Musgrave beat Mr. B. Drake, 6-2; 6-4. Mr. R. Musgrave beat Mr. E. Musgrave, 6-4; 6-2. Mr. A. B. Longe's opponent (W. Ethington) withdrew.

Third round—Mr. Long beat Mr. Combe, 4-6; 6-2; 6-3. Mr. R. Musgrave beat Mr. J. Musgrave, 6-1, 0-6; 6-3.

Final round.—Mr. Longe beat Mr. R. Musgrave, 6-1; 6-2.

Some of the matches were keenly contested, notably those between Miss Musgrave and Miss Barkley; Mr. Combe, and Mr. Barkley, and Mr. Combe and Mr. Longe.

Mr. Maitland Dougall, the secretary of the Cowichan lawn tennis club, managed the tournament with good tact and earned the thanks of the participants. The ladies of the district, not only added to the success of the tournament by their presence, but they entertained the players and spectators to a charming luncheon and tea.

The tournament commencing Monday next promises to be interesting and exciting. The entries are coming in very rapidly.

PORT ANGELES PLACER MINES.

The Land About the City Full of Golden Specks.

Port Angeles, Aug. 3.—About ten days ago Mr. Reed, of the firm of Reed & McBride, of Tacoma, came quietly here and began prospecting for gold in the near vicinity. He brought with him some old experienced miners. Their anticipations were realized beyond their most sanguine hopes. On Friday Mr. Reed brought into town the gold they had washed, and it was seen by a number of citizens. Reed was greatly wrought up. He immediately made a plat and had his claim filed at Dungeness.

In washing they merely used an old felt hat, and say the soil is rich in gold.

All day yesterday parties were locating mining claims, in many cases encroaching on the squatters' claims. However, they all agree to give the squatters quitclaim deeds for their lots should the mining claims hold good. There is much excitement.

HEALTH AND HOUSEHOLD.

USEFUL AND INSTRUCTIVE HINTS OF MATTERS AROUND THE HOME.

Care of the Sick an Important Matter—Proper Food and Clothing are Main Conditions of Health—General Notes.

There are certain simple facts in regard to the care of the sick that any young girl should know before she is called upon to preside over a home of her own. Physicians say there are few women capable of making a poultice, a cup of beef tea, or a piece of toast properly. If one has never had care of an invalid, there may be some excuse for not knowing practically how to make a poultice, but one can at least inform herself as far as the theory goes. A cold, clammy poultice is positively harmful. To make a linseed poultice, pour a quantity of warm water into a tin basin, stand on the back of the range, and scatter in the linseed meal, stirring with a knife until a proper consistency. In the use of the water you must be governed by the size of the poultice required. If it is too dry it will not hold together, if too wet it is damp and uncomfortable. It should be moist, without being sloppy. Now take a clean piece of muslin a couple of inches larger all round than the poultice is to be, spread it with the mixture, cover with another piece of muslin, and quickly baste over an inch all around. Do this without removing it from the hot dish, on which it should be carried to the bedside. If it is necessary to fasten it on, do this with folds of bandaging, and cover with compress of flannel to retain the heat. A piece of oil silk is less clumsy and will keep moisture from the bed clothes. There are many different formulas for preparing beef tea, but the simplest and best is as follows: Cover one pound of lean beef from the round with a pint of cold water. Have the butcher chop it fine as for Hamburger steak; beat it in the water with a silver fork for ten minutes; place over the fire, simmer for twenty minutes, strain and set aside to cool, in order to remove any little flakes of fat that may form. When ready to serve, make it hot, season with salt only, and serve with thin, brown toast, or little water crackers.

General Notes.

Egg shells burned in the oven and placed upon the pantry shelves will keep bugs away.

A few drops of extract of lavender will prevent mucilage from moulding or becoming sour.

Clothespins boiled a few minutes and quickly dried once or twice a month become more durable.

Soft tissue paper is the best for polishing mirrors. This may also be used for polishing or drying window glass.

The best way to mend torn leaves of books is pasting them with white tissue-paper. The print will show through it.

When you want to take out a broken window pane, heat the poker, run it slowly along the old putty and soften it loose.

If ribbons need renewing wash them in cool suds, made of soap, and iron when damp. Cover with a clean cloth and iron over it.

Paint stains may generally be removed with either turpentine or benzine, but if these have no effect you might try a little chloroform.

To remove the shiny look from black clothes wash well, then dip black cloth in hot tea and coffee, equal parts of each and sponge clothes.

A paste of soft soap and starch will take stains out of bed ticking. Spread it on the spots, and when dry scrape off and wash with a damp sponge.

A firm faith is the best divinity; a good life is the best philosophy; a clear conscience is the best law; honesty is the best policy, and temperance the best physic.

Entire wheat flour is said to require less shortening than ordinary flour. It is a wholesome food, makes good hasty pudding, gems, bread, cakes and even pie crust.

Shrunken, half-worn bed-blankets or comforts, past using on a bed, make good pads to put under a stair carpet. They will be a great saving in the wear of the stair carpet.

Three simple meals a day, as little alcohol as possible, and daily labor, warm clothing, sufficient food, sun and air, are the main conditions upon which health can be enjoyed.

Flannels and blankets may be soaked in water containing one tablespoonful of ammonia to the pail, and a little suds. Rub as little as possible and they will be white and clean, and will not shrink.

Sprinkling the floor with a good allowance of damp salt, or sawdust, after taking up the carpet, and just before sweeping, will be found excellent to prevent the dust rising through the house. It will save also both muscle and lungs.

Put a teaspoonful of ammonia in a quart of water; wash your brushes and combs in this, and all grease and dirt will disappear. Rinse, shake and dry in the sun or by the fire. Be sure and let brushes stand to dry with the hair side down.

A little powdered potash thrown into rat holes will drive the rodents away that are so annoying in cellar or kitchen; cayenne pepper will have the same effect on rats and cockroaches, and a mouse will never gnaw through a piece of cotton sprinkled with cayenne that is stuffed in his hole.

Juvenile Perplexity.

A member of a certain order invited several brother members to call at his house for the purpose of organizing a Buildingand Loan Association.

When they had arrived the gentleman's wife and little son were in the parlor, to whom he introduced his friends as brother so and so.

His son sized each individual up for all he was worth, and when the good-nights were in vogue, the party was electrified by the youngster saying: "You may be dad's brothers and my uncles, but I'll be Jim Crowed if I can see any family resemblance."—Texas Siftings.

THE EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT.

surely unreasonable, for who can tell who is going to make an ill or a good use of it? The man who has acquired it unjustly, or uses it wrongfully, is more to be pitied than the poor. It will eat his flesh like fire; he has heaped up treasure for the last days. But this is not in our hands. "Vengeance is mine; I will repay," saith the Lord.

Secondly, I would observe that the picture I have drawn has no counterpart in this land. As far as I can understand the case, employers have not taken advantage of workingmen here. Without at all qualifying my opinion on the general case as to shorter hours, I may be permitted to observe, first, that the wages of skilled workingmen here have been from the beginning at a figure not lower than that at which many in England who—in society language—live as gentlefolk, would be glad to have. Secondly, that while the class of workingmen have an undoubted right to state the terms on which they will work, common fairness, the golden rule in fact, requires that in view of established usage and implied though unwritten agreement, this should be done with due consideration of existing contracts and obligations, otherwise it is the employers and not the men that are taken at a disadvantage. I do not compare this wrong, if a wrong, with the case I have described where the disadvantage takes the form of misery and distress; but if it takes the form of depriving employers of their honest profits, and perhaps of turning them into a loss, we can hardly call it equal and just. I am not prepared to say how the problem may stand here should the workingmen decide on the eight hours demand. It is really a matter that must work itself out between themselves and employers, society meanwhile looking on with such expressions of their opinions as seemeth them best. For, on society, should the stand be taken, the loss must ultimately fall. In all this I am only stating my individual opinion from casual observation, having had no conference on the subject with either workingmen or employers.

I have been speaking, on the whole, less by way of local application than as from a London pulpit. All eyes are turned thitherward. If the labor question be settled for the great populations it will be settled for everywhere. It is not here a burning question. It lacks the elements which are ready to break into a conflagration in places where multitudes are packed together and from their squalid abodes watch the shining regions of wealth within touch, whence hardly a look of sympathy or help comes forth to cheer or save them.

It is not to be thought that the eight hours plan, though obtained by mutual consent, will remedy all evils; but I can quite imagine that in many cases it would be a veritable liberation of slaves. Think of the boon it would be to the workingwomen, the wives and mothers, who drudge from morning to night, and are never able to overtake their daily recurring task. She the housewife, can have little help from her husband, nor will she accept it. He is the breadwinner, and, as such, she slaves for him that he may have needful rest and food. If she fall sick, God help her; she will work as long as she can stand; and then help comes, not from the wealthy, but from her toiling sister next door, who takes up the falling burden. But now her strong companion can give her a helping hand in the morning when work is most pressing, to set in line for the day. At 4 o'clock he is free. He is not going to the saloon. Beauty and comfort, the work of loving hands, surround his home, and make it the sweetest place on earth. The garden obtains a share of his attention, and he is not too weary to dress it, and to keep it. In the evening now and then he can take his family in search of recreation or improvement. The Lord's Day is more prized. Souring misery no longer preys upon his faith; he learns to fear God and seek his face and prepare for the better land.

I have set forth very imperfectly, some of the phases of the great labor question in our day. I can but in conclusion enforce upon all my hearers to observe the law of God in their action thereon in this our peaceful and highly favored community—the law of God, not as contained in literal precepts, but as written in the heart of everyone who fears God. The world is in unrest, mostly because this law is so greatly neglected. Let all who regard it, both on the one side and on the other, wait the generation of its happy effects in the gradual maturing of upright methods, confident that those who regard it not will in due course fall into line, and acquiesce through the force of their example.

NOVELTY IN EARNEST.

CO-OPERATIVE DINING SOLVES THE SERVANT GIRL QUESTION.

Details of the Decatur Neighborhood Boarding House Scheme—Fifty-Four Members Who Live on the Best at the Lowest Possible Cost.

At Decatur, Ill., public interest is centered on "The Roby." There are such things on at "The Roby," as have not been witnessed since the first spirit rappings were heard at Rochester. This pretty little city has electric street railways, six newspapers, a dozen fine churches, a metropolitan air, clean streets, good water—and the servant-girl question. But all these "ain't nothin'," as a small boy remarked in my presence when these advantages were being enumerated. "We've got something Chicago ain't got. It's a Bellamy boarding-house."

"I am in the swim," remarked a quiet gentleman. "Come down and see us. We are living off the fat of the land for $2.75 a week per head. And we have no bother, no worry about servants. We are located at "The Roby."

This is the history of the experiment:

Miss Fanny Fuller and her mother boarded at The Roby with Mrs. Guyton. It was the swell boarding house of Decatur. The Misses Witherspoon, two handsome young ladies, also boarded there. Mrs. Guyton never had any trouble with her servant girls.

Why?

Because the work was systematized. One did the cooking and laundry work, another the second work. One had the table to wait on and the dining room to care for. When their work was done the girls went where they pleased. Their liberty after work hours did not depend on the caprice of a mistress or the exigencies of a private house.

This set Miss Fanny Fuller to thinking. One day she read "Looking Backward," and proceeded to look forward. Where others read and marvelled and criticised, she read and adapted. One morning she came into Mrs. Guyton's room with an idea. She read the chapter from Bellamy's book on the public dining room.

"Why can't we do it!" she asked.

"We can," said Mrs. Guyton, decidedly.

Miss Fuller put on her smart jacket and hat and called on the ladies of her acquaintance with her idea. Everybody was charmed. The gentlemen forgot impatience and listened.

A few weeks later a meeting was held in Mrs. Guyton's parlors. After a number of whereases it was resolved to establish:

1. A cooperative association for the benefit of all its members.
2. No debts shall be contracted.
3. A President, Secretary, and Treasurer shall be elected from among the members.
4. A Superintendent shall be appointed to act as the purchasing agent of the club, vouchers to be delivered to the Treasurer.
5. Members shall pay $2.75 a week board to the Treasurer; children under 10 half price.
6. The Superintendent is to have entire charge of the dining-room, kitchen, and servants, under the direction of a Board of Managers.

It was agreed by all present to sign the constitution, these being the charter members. Applicants for membership should have their names posted in the dining-room three days before admission, and no one was to be received if a serious objection were raised by one of the members. Mrs. B. K. Durfee was elected President and Miss Fannie Fuller Treasurer and Secretary.

Mrs. Guyton's basement was rented, including a large dining room, kitchen, and pantries, a manager installed, two cooks, and three waiter girls hired, and the Cooperative Club, after paying a membership fee of $3 and one week's board in advance, sat down to their first meal at The Roby. Mrs. Guyton gave up keeping boarders, and she and all her guests fell into the new order of things. There is no doubt about Mrs. Guyton's enthusiasm. She met me and began another book of her epic.

"What are we doing down here? Why you see expenses foot up so high in this thriving, growing, booming city of Decatur that people couldn't stand it. Our swell people are swell, I can tell you. They formed this eating club, indulged in the luxury of doing the discharging of servants for once, put out the fires in the ranges, locked up their larders, turned their kitchens into sewing rooms or nurseries, closed up accounts, and drove dull care away.

"We have fifty-four members—men, women, and children—all of the upper-crust aristocracy who are used to living well, and they wouldn't put up with anything but the best. We get that for $2.75 a week a head; half price for children."

"What do you have to eat?"

"Everything in season. Stay to supper and find out. Now we get everything down to minimum cost by having each family bring their own linen and silver and fancy dishes. We have a common stock of decorated china. The club rents my basement, including the range. Expenses are like this:

Rent (at $25 a month)	$6 00
Manager's salary	10 00
Head cook	5 00
Second cook	4 00
Three waiters at $2.50	7.50
Per week	$32.50

"The income is from:

Fifty-two grown people, at $2.75	$142 00
One child, half pay	1 40
	$143 40

"Miss Fuller gets her board for her services as Secretary and Treasurer."

Miss Fuller came in presently and opened her books for our inspection. It was discovered that a certain bill of fare was guaranteed for the price. This is something like what the club eats:

BREAKFAST.

Fruit; cereal food of some kind; two kinds of meat; eggs, potatoes, biscuit griddle cakes or rolls, toast, tea, and coffee.

DINNER.

Soup, relish, or salad; one kind of fish and two kinds of meat; three vegetables: pie or pudding, fruit, coffee, tea, chocolate, or milk.

SUPPER.

Cold meat; baked or cream potatoes; salad; hot rolls, cakes, or muffins, fruit or dessert; coffee, tea, chocolate, or milk.

"That is about as good as anybody lives," remarked Miss Fuller. "It is all dainty and well cooked and nicely served."

I went down into the dining room, a large, cool apartment in the basement. Eight or nine tables were covered with snowy linen. Napkins in rings, silver, and china were on the table. In the kitchen across the hall, where a range was going at full blast, five girls black as Egypt, were sitting around the table eating dinner. Custard and cabbage were beautifully blended on their plates.

I stayed to supper. The ladies came in the newest thing in tea jackets, and sat on the front piazza. One of the Misses Witherspoon had an aureole of pale golden hair. The company was merry and talked volubly about their experiment. On the wall was the name of an applicant for membership. He will have to wait until some of the members go away for the summer.

There was cold roast beef, baked potatoes, potato salad, eggs, a delicate custard, and cake, with tea, coffee, chocolate, or milk. Everything was good and abundant, and served in the best style.

The members all expressed themselves as being charmed with the experiment and did not fear the pessimistic prophecies concerning its destruction. The books show that bills are being paid up every week out of the allowance. It is a success, financially and socially, so far, and I can recommend the table.

If you should ever go to Decatur, I advise you to get a room somewhere and take your meals at The Roby, in the co-operative boarding house. Guests are charged 25 cents a meal. By this means you will fare better for less money, meet the cream of Decatur society, and see the practical working of a part of Bellamy's dream. You will be converted to the idea of co-operative cuisines and go home to spread the new gospel. Cooks will be abolished from dwelling houses and housekeepers emancipated.

The servant girl question will be solved.

THEY QUAILED BEFORE WOMEN.

Noted Men Who Were Confused in the Presence of the Opposite Sex.

The writer knows it for a fact that the Hon. Caleb Cushing, who, with the exception of the Hon. Rufus Choate (par nobile fratrum), was the best man to sit and listen to he has ever been acquainted with, was substantially dumb in the society of women. He either did not know how to talk to them, or he would not, and he could scarcely look in the face of one of them without blushing. He could not look them fairly in the eyes, in fact, nor could he men either, for that matter. There seemed to be an unaccountable timidity and shrinking about him, as there was even about Choate himself, great man as he was.

And the writer would remark, in passing, that he remembers, as to the latter, that one evening at one of the large hotels in Boston there was a reunion, for some purpose, of the graduates of Harvard College in and about Boston, and Choate was one of the invited guests. The late brilliant Josiah Quincy, Jr. (as he was then), presided at the table with his usual inimitable grace and piquancy. While the company was assembling the writer (then a very young man) was standing by himself in a corner, when Choate came in, with a slouchy gait and his head down, looking as confused as a schoolboy, and, catching a glance of the writer, he rushed eagerly toward him and, grasping his arm, said substantially: "You must help me up to the committee," who were standing in the hall receiving the guests.

We had only advanced a few steps, however, when Choate, being discovered, was pulled hither and thither by hosts of hands, and the writer was left again to commune with himself, or with others like him and of his own age who happened to be standing near; not, however, before he had ventured modestly to remark to Choate how surprised he was that a man of his experience and distinction should be at all desirous of thus walking under cover, as it were. And I have stated in a previous paper how he always avoided as much as possible the eyes of men, and how, when walking from his office to his house, he preferred to walk through lanes and the narrowest rather than through the most crowded streets. He was very peculiar in this particular.

I have it from authority which cannot be questioned that Mr. Cushing once, at an evening party in Newburyport, attempting to make himself agreeable, it is to be presumed, said to a pretty, bright-eyed girl of 17 or 18 summers, and quite distinguished for her beauty and accomplishments in the circle of her young admirers: "Pray, Miss ——, can you tell me how love begins?" And she instantly replied, with a merry twinkle and a smile," "Why, with L, of course," thus discomfiting the distinguished scholar and statesman, and getting the laugh of the bystanders upon him.—Boston Journal.

Women's Idea of Money.

Women always have curious ideas about where to keep money when travelling. I know one who travelled from New York to Florida with $2,000 between the sole of her foot and her stocking, and she slept with her stockings on. Another one always pinned her money just inside her corset, until she was told that if she fainted anywhere the first thing a good Samaritan would do would be to loosen her bodice and stays, and then some wicked Pharisee would discover the ducats and grab them. Since she has heard this she has taken to pinning the fortune to the back of her corsets, claiming that, even if she were taken ill, as she would be laid flat on her back, insensible or not, she would be sure of her treasure Woman never appreciate the value of a check—until it is cashed. It doesn't seem like money to them, and I feel certain that if the average women were offered her choice between $5,00 in notes and $1,000 in a check, and both were before her and she had no time to think it out much, she would choose the $500 and conclude she had the best of the bargain. There is no exaggeration in the story of a woman who, on hearing somebody say that a diamond cost $1,500, asserted. "Oh, no, I am sure it cost more than that—I am sure it was something over a thousand!"—Philadelphia Times.

Arrested in the Pulpit for Bigamy.

While vigorously expounding the Gospel to a large congregation in Union A. M. E. Church, Camden, at 10 o'clock on Sunday night, the Rev. Matthew Register was confronted by Constable Beckett's huge figure.

"I want you," said the constable quietly.

"Me? Foh de Lawd! Whatcher want now?" asked the preacher.

"You are charged with bigamy," said the constable, "and you will have to go to 'Squire Colding's office with me."

The benediction was quickly pronounced, and the Rev. Register walked to the Justice's office. The charge was to the effect that the preacher had married Mary E. Blackson on Jan. 25, 1880, at Chester, Pa., and on Feb. 5 of the present year had taken unto wife Mary Thompson in Camden. The latter marriage he denied. He was committed, however, in default of $150 bail.—Phila. Record.

What Virginia Girls Know.

Several gentlemen from the North have been in Fredericksburg recently with the view of purchasing saddle horses. One day last week one of them took a notion to try one of several horses in the stables of the gentlemen who had them for sale; but as he was not familiar with either the horse or mode of saddling and bridling him, was about to forego the pleasure of a horseback ride when one of our local beauties came to the rescue and in a moment showed the Northerner what a true Southern girl was capable of doing. Entering the stall she removed the halter, adjusted the bridle, led the animal out of the stable, and, throwing the saddle on his back, buckled the girth and ordered the blushing Northener to mount while she held the stirrup for him. He was stunned, but enjoyed the ride immensely, doubtless surprised that a woman so fair could be so handy.—Fredericksburg Free Lance.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL and ONLY GENUINE. Advice to Invalids—If you wish to obtain relief from pain and anguish, to calm and quiet, refreshing sleep, free from headache, assuage the weary achings of protracted disease, invigorate the nervous media, and regulate the circulating system of the body, you will provide yourself with that marvellous remedy discovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne (late Army Medical Staff), to which he gave the name of CHLORODYNE, and which is admitted by the profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, etc.

, Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See "Lancet," December 31, 1864.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the inventor of Chlorodyne; that the story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See" The Times," July 13, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle. Caution—Beware of Piracy and Imitations.

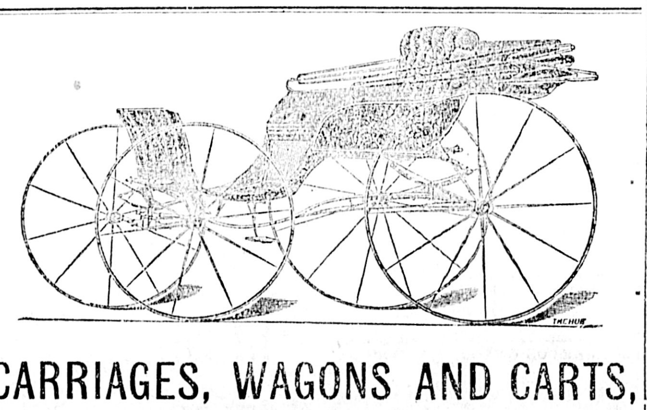

Sole Manufacturer—J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 Great Russell-square, Bloomsbury, London. me20-6ms-law

THE OCEAN TERMINUS OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

PORT CRESCENT.

A FEW UNDENIABLE FACTS:

President T. F. Oakes says the Victoria, Port Crescent and Chehalis Railway will be completed by the 31st December, 1891. This will make Port Crescent the terminus of the strongest corporation on the American Continent. Work on the breakwater will commence immediately and will be completed during next year; the Harbor will then accommodate 120 ships, allowing one cable (see Minard on Harbors) to each large merchant vessel in which to swing, not including twice that number which might be tied up to wharves. Port Crescent will then be possessed of one of the best harbors on the coast.

The soundings on the Company's Map are guaranteed to be correct.

More than 3,000,000 acres of the richest land in the State of Washington, lying to the West and Southwest, are directly tributary to Port Crescent.

It is confidently predicted that in ten years the population of Port Crescent will rival that of Tacoma and Seattle combined.

We strongly recommend to our friends and the public generally the advisability of securing a few lots at present prices. Lots, that to-day can be bought for hundreds, will be worth in a few months as many thousands. We have a limited number of choice lots at present on sale.

The C. P. R. are selling excursion tickets to Banff and return at $35. These tickets are limited to 60 days and allow passengers the privilege of stopping off at Harrison Hot Springs, Glacier and Field. A. Cameron, agent.

Mr. Pieser, the leading continental basso profundo sings at the festival at St. Andrew's, Wednesday evening.

Rev. Charles E. Manning, of Toronto, is spending a holiday on the Coast, part of his sojourn being devoted to Victoria. He preached Sunday evening in Pandora Methodist church, taking for his text, "Jesus came to seek and to save that which was lost," from which he delivered an eloquent and profitable sermon.

NOTES FROM THE INTERIOR.

(From the Star, Sentinel and Miner.)

On the townsite of Ainsworth is a fine hot spring, the temperature of which is over 120 degrees. A. A. McKinnon, the hotel man, has erected a bath-house over it, and visitors to that coming mining metropolis may now avail themselves of as fine a plunge bath as can be had at any health resort on the Pacific coast.

Steel rails sufficient for 21 miles of track have been shipped to Sproat, about 2,500 tons, and 60 car-loads, say 1,000 tons more, are yet to go.

A collection of minerals from West Kootenay is being made to send to the Toronto exposition. The specimens, with the assay value attached, will be arranged in an exhibition car, and the promoters of the exhibit expect to make it the finest ever made from any mineral district in America.

Conflicting reports come from the railroad camps between Nelson and Sproat. The contractors say everything is going on swimmingly, and that they will be finished up on time; outsiders say that the men are dissatisfied at the low wages paid, and that they are leaving in large numbers daily.

It is understood, but not officially announced yet, that the annual C. P. R. picnic for the Pacific Division will be held at Victoria on the 16th inst.

Another town has been started on Kootenay Lake, at Busk's Point, and lots are for sale.

The Cariboo stage robber has evidently made his escape beyond the reach of the law. Constable Pearson has not yet returned from the North Thompson river, but there are no great chances of his having captured the highwayman, owing to the heavily timbered country through which they had to travel and the long start obtained by the pursued party.

The Revelstoke Mining Company, limited, was organized in January last at London, England, and although it is an institution entirely distinct from the smelter company, it is managed by the same parties, both companies having each a separate capital of $200,000. It was started for the purpose of buying and operating mines, and last week at Hot Springs, its managers, Mr. Boyle and Dr. Campnell, made their first purchases—the whole of both No. 1 and United, two-thirds of the Great Eastern, and one-half of the E.W.R. The No. 1 was bought from Velnoweth and Duncan for $15,000, and the E. W. R. and Great Eastern from the same parties for $1,000. The United was got from Hughand Tom McGovern and James E. Dolan for $7,500; the total purchases amounting to $23,500.
